

Short CV Martin Helguson

Martin Helguson is a PhD from Linköping University and has solid industrial experience since 1998 including positions as senior R&D project leader, manager of CAD/CAM/CAE-development and integration, and Process-CIO within product development and production.

He has been engaged in and led several initiatives in the fields of digital manufacturing, metrology, ICT/IIoT and product service systems. His current position is Function expert and Technology Area Manager within Cyber-physical manufacturing systems & analytics and is active at the department Digital products and services - Advanced planning at Sandvik Coromant.

Furthermore, he has been engaged in several national and European research projects as well as in national and international networks and collaborations within industry and academia. He is behind a number of patents and invention disclosures and has been nominated to three innovation prizes.